What you can do about obscene, harassing or threatening phone calls

It's our policy—indeed, it's our business—to make sure that customers receive the best possible phone service.

That's why, when the telephone becomes an instrument of annoyance, unpleasantness or harassment, it's a matter of the most serious concern to us.

There are three things that you and members of your family can do about such calls, if you receive any.

1. Don't talk to a caller you're doubtful of. Don't give him the audience he wants.

2. Hang up at the first obscene word, or if the caller doesn't say anything, or doesn't identify himself to your satisfaction.

3. Call your Bell Telephone Business Office if the annoyance persists. We have employees who are trained to assist and advise you and who can frequently help in identifying the origin of unwelcome and troublesome calls.

In communities across the nation, we are working with police officials and other authorities to curb abusive calling.

In most circumstances we can reveal the origin of abusive calls to law enforcement authorities with the consent of the called party. We want to do all we can to protect your right to privacy.

The more everyone cooperates, the fewer such calls there will be.

Why would a millionaire go around pinching cigarettes?

Because he smokes new Waterford with the water tip...the tip you pinch for flavor.

There are tiny capsules of water in the tip of every Waterford cigarette. Before you light up, you pinch the blue lines on the Waterford band. This releases the moisture, and you're ready to enjoy the newest taste in smoking!

Can I pinch a Waterford?

■ Does television keep children from reading? Does it affect their school grades? Their vocabularies? Does it make them listless? Aggressive?

Some answers to these questions are to be found in the latest report from Dr. Paul A. Witty of the School of Education at Northwestern University. Ever since 1949 Dr. Witty has been conducting continuing studies in Chicago area elementary schools on the effect of television on children. In the report on his 1965 survey, Dr. Witty cites his own findings and those of other authorities to support some conclusions that will interest parents.

■ Dr. Witty: "TV offers not an obstacle to reading; actually it can be a source of stimulation and incentive."

A Stanford University study: "On the basis of data at hand we cannot say that heavy television viewing, at any stage of the elementary school, significantly lowers school grades."

■ A number of studies show that children in TV homes have better vocabularies when entering school than children who have not been exposed to television. But, says Dr. Witty, "Our studies suggest that the initial gains in the vocabulary of young children will not persist unless there are efforts to sustain them."

A British study: "Even heavy viewing does not necessarily make children more aggressive or listless."

■ Perhaps the most surprising aspect of Dr. Witty's findings has been the evidence of growing sophistication in children's viewing tastes. In 1949 the favorites among the elementary school students he studied were Hopalong Cassidy, Howdy Doody, Lone Ranger, Milton Berle and Arthur Godfrey. In 1965 children in the same grades of the same schools picked as their favorites Man from U.N.C.L.E., Bewitched, Shindig, The Addams Family, My Favorite Martian and Bonanza.

FUGITIVE

Still on the move,

BY JERRY KOBRIN

Pernell Roberts, bearded and bare-foot, was prowling the cluttered room. "Let's face it, man," he said heavily. "I've got a problem."

There were seconds of silence as he contemplated a Pisa-like tower of books. There was hopelessness in his gesture, in his tone.

"Every day the load gets heavier," intoned TV's most celebrated real-life fugitive. "My big problem now is . . ."

His interviewer cocked his ball-point and awaited the revelation.

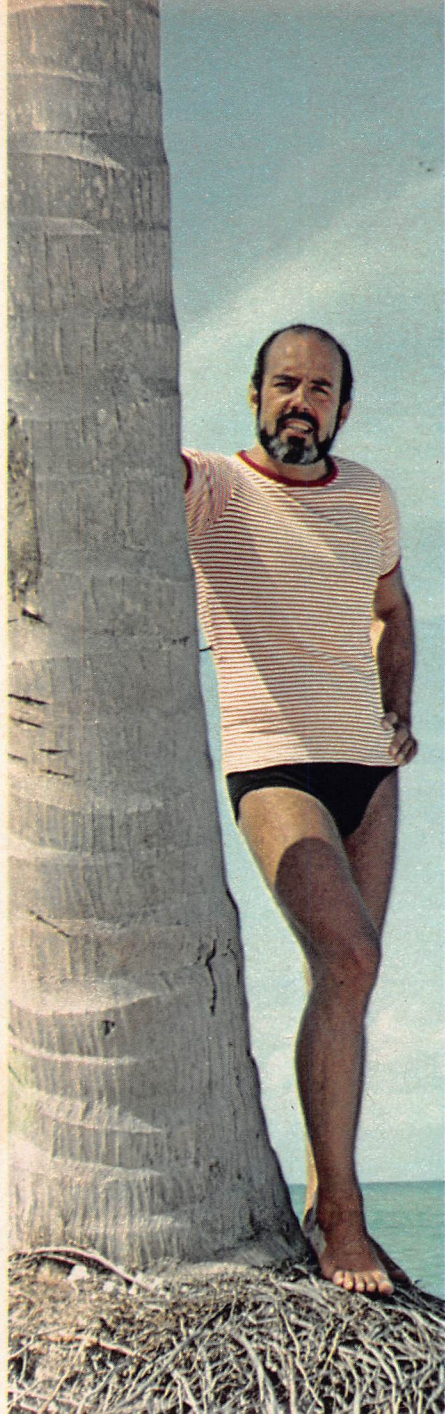

" . . . how in hell I'm going to get all this [obscenity] packed in time to catch the cruise ship. Judy and I have been living like gypsies, accumulating all this stuff as we go." All fugitives should have such problems.

Since blowing the Ponderosa in February 1965, thus renouncing further claim to the Bonanza bonanza, the erstwhile Adam Cartwright has been as accessible to interviews as, say, Howard Hughes.

"Look, I didn't solicit this little chat," he said with the ingratiating tact that had endeared him to the rest of the Cartwright clan. "I happen to like and trust Danny Burack, and that's why you're here. He said you were an OK guy."

Danny Burack was the owner of the Galen Beach Hotel, in Key Biscayne, Fla., when the Robertses had checked in a month before for a two-week stay—the tenure of Roberts' reign as the party of the first part in "The King and I" at Miami's Coconut Grove Playhouse. Nobody, until now, had been bugging him at his ocean-front villa, so he and his attractive Judy

FROM THE PONDEROSA

Pernell Roberts stops long enough to sound off about Vietnam, money, survival, The Truth—and, oh yes, 'Bonanza' had stayed and stayed. And now they were going—to Port Everglades, Nassau, Jamaica, Haiti—to “keep the vacation going.” Then back to the States, to Milwaukee to pick up a $7500 custom-made Excalibur S+S sports car, then home to Hollywood’s 99 North Sycamore Ave. And then?

“I shall look for employment.”

Another television series?

The Florida sun was burning brightly, but the temperature in the Roberts’ villa suddenly plunged like a barometer in a hurricane.

“There are other opportunities open to actors,” he said, as frost formed on near-by fronds. “The stage, the screen.” Any bookings?

“Look, I live day to day and deal with things as they come. There is no program, no grand design. When I’m not working, I’ll be pondering.”

Pondering what?

“Man’s inhumanity to man.”

Uh, could he be more specific?

“Look, I’ve said it all before. It’s been in TV GUIDE and elsewhere. I see no point in going through the whole shtick again.”

OK, OK. What about such mundane things as daily bread?

“I’m not exactly hungry. I’ve got 25,000 in the bank, and there’s that 500 every week in deferred payments from Bonanza, for the next five years. And they do pay me, y’know, for appearing on the stage.”

And how much was he making in Bonanza when he quit?

“Same as the others. Ten thousand an episode, for 36 episodes. Or was it 33 episodes, Judy? I forget.”

Had he viewed Bonanza since his self-imposed exile?

“Funny you should ask that. Just last Sunday night we were in the sack and the TV was on, and there it was. Man, it was funny.”

Was it supposed to be funny?

“No, I don’t think so, but I thought it was funnier’n hell. There was another funny show later that night, ‘Under Two Flags,’ and that broke me up too, especially when Claudette Colbert kept that marked contrast to 'Adam Cartwright' (right).

rendezvous out there in the desert with Ronald Colman. Great dialog, really great. I could see it again."

Could he see Bonanza again? "No."

Other than the funniness, did he have any other thoughts about Bonanza?

"Yeah, I thought how fortunate I am not being with it. It's amazing how I managed to survive six years of utter frustration. It really was a crusher for me, mentally. I even went to a doctor for help. I had to get out."

What bugged him most?

"The plots, the godawful plots. They take a plot and write it six different ways for six different Sundays. One week it's lawyer night. Next week it's rancher night. You change the protagonist, but it's the same old plot. And the writing! Gad!"

There was silence as Roberts soul-searched the ocean, pondered, then padded into the kitchen to build another round of drinks.

"Look, I've no desire to throw any more brickbats. If I hadn't seen the show accidentally on Sunday night you wouldn't even have got me to talk about it. Why talk about things that don't even matter? There are big things happening, like Vietnam."

OK, what about Vietnam?

"I think it's a tragic farce. When I hear or read about our country's need to 'save face,' I don't know whether to laugh or cry. What the hell, if I'm wrong, I admit it, period. What's the big hangup? It's a schizophrenic thing. Actually, what it all boils down to is that there's no altruism in the world, and therein lies the great tragedy. God, I wish I could be more articulate. So much is happening in the world today."

If Pernell Roberts could do a one-sentence broadcast to the world, what would be his message?

There wasn't a split-beat of hesitation. "I would tell all of humanity to stop hating, start loving."

Judy Roberts, who had trudged alongside her husband in the Selma march, beamed happily: "I like the slogan, 'Let's make love, not war!'"

"Beautiful, beautiful," Pernell said. "I would want my message to be beamed mainly to the young people, to make them understand real values. I would love to address student organizations, engage in campus debates, make them see the truth."

And what is The Truth?

"That there's a helluva lot more to life than making money. I sometimes think that people don't care about anything except making that [obscenity] dollar."

Isn't money necessary to survive?

"Look, myself, I have a strong sense of survival. I try to behave in such a way that I cannot be victimized or destroyed, literally or figuratively, by the conscious hysteria of the society in which we live." Is anyone seeking to victimize or destroy him?

"Let's just say that I haven't been able to prove anything—not yet, anyway—and let it go at that. My lawyers know what's happening. I'm not about to be intimidated by anyone, no matter how powerful he may imagine himself to be."

Could he name names? Someone high in the network?

"I could, but I won't. Let's see how things develop."

It was time to dine.

"You must try pompano amandine à la Galen," Pernell Roberts said. "It's truly superb. But first a Margarita."

He summoned the bartender.

"Remember now, one and one-half parts tequila, one part lemon juice, one-half part Triple Sec or Cointreau. Make sure the glass is thoroughly chilled and rimmed with salt."

"Yes, sir," the bartender burred, grabbing for bottles, "One Pernell Roberts Special coming up."

GOING FIRST CLASS all the way

The accommodations are luxurious, even if the train has to move by slow freight

When Bob Conrad tours The Wild, Wild West in his private railroad car, he is surrounded not only by luxury, but by a hidden arsenal in which an innocent statue is really a pistol, and beautiful Victorian furniture can shoot bullets. It's all part of Conrad's stock in trade as that sagebrush secret agent, James West.

The interiors of Conrad's fancy train are specially constructed sets in CBS Studio Center. They include a kitchen (left), a parlor (center, right), a gun room-laboratory (bottom, right) and a bedroom—all of which cost about $35,000 to build.

The original train itself, used for exteriors, sits on a siding between stints of location filming. "People are fascinated by this train," says associate producer Len Katzman. "It has everything from a 75-mm. cannon (the parts are hidden aboard the train) to carrier pigeons." It is also home for the series. "Every show has a home set, and this train is ours," Katzman says.

Pinpointing some of the train's gimmicks—firearms, smoke-screen units and secret locks—Katzman adds, "On a coffee table we had two mounted pistols. Decorator pieces—but they could be fired via foot pedals at each end of the car. And there's that gun rack. It slides down from behind the pigeon loft—with its fake eggs, actually bombs.

"And what looks like a hot plate on the kitchen stove is actually a pistol. Trigger's on the handle. That stove can also emit a smoke screen when a pellet is dropped into the fire.

"We had pool cues that were rifles. Of the three billiard balls, two were smoke bombs and the third was a real bomb. There is also a statue that flips over—with a gun in its base."

Scores of other secret weapons are hidden behind sliding panels or in secret compartments. Who thinks up the gadgets? "Writers come up with a script that has a new gimmick," Katzman says. "So, we incorporate it in the car. One writer wanted to split the car in half, leaving the heavies on one end and our men on the other. We passed that one up."

The upcoming season will see Conrad riding a new car, a 1967 model, so to speak. And like all new models, it'll be loaded with extras—like a fireplace that swings open to give Conrad a secret escape hatch.

Those Busy Network Surgeons Are Still At It

Despite the moans of actors, directors and producers, movies are being slashed,
and there seems to be no cure in sight

BY JOSEPH FINNIGAN

The late comedian Stan Laurel often complained that TV "horribly mutilated" movies he made with the fat, slow-burning Oliver (Babe) Hardy.

"Babe and I made more than 300 pictures," he once said. "And we had great fun doing them. But there's very little enjoyment watching ourselves on TV these days. Our films are horribly mutilated. They are so badly edited that I only get angry."

One summer afternoon a few years back I sat with the usually soft-spoken Laurel and asked him about it. He was almost in a rage as he answered, "They sometimes cut those films to the point where the joke is missed entirely." He still suffered from the effects of a stroke and was partially paralyzed, but he paced angrily back and forth in the living room of his Santa Monica apartment overlooking the Pacific Ocean. His remarks were aimed at those who destroyed the quality of his films.

Stan Laurel is dead, but the problem that so angered and frustrated that aging clown is still very much alive. Only now there are a few in Hollywood fighting to regain the "artistic control" they feel has been rudely wrested from them. The argument no longer takes place in living rooms, the complaints are no longer heard exclusively in plush Beverly Hills restaurants. The battle is now taking place in law courts.

The battle pits powerful TV networks—the buyers—and Hollywood studios—the sellers—against an ever-growing group of producers and directors, men no longer content with idle grumbling. Otto Preminger, the tough producer-director, was the first to file court action to protect his pictures from too eager TV editors.

Preminger sued Columbia Pictures and its TV subsidiary Screen Gems over his 1959 movie "Anatomy of a Murder." He sought a court injunction preventing any editing or cutting of the film for TV showing. He claimed this right under his contract to produce the picture. The court refused him a permanent injunction.

"This is a principle which I think concerns everybody in my profession very much," he says. "I think any cut is a violation of my contract." He says the producer's right to control final editing of a theatrical film is "not easy to get; you work all your life for it." And he objects to "hundreds of TV stations" across the country assuming his rights. "Anatomy of a Murder" was shown on TV, but without cuts, Preminger says, "because the picture was under the protection of a temporary injunction." But, he still complains, "They didn't cut. They only interrupted. I think the 36 commercial interruptions are just as bad."

Preminger plans to continue the fight. He still has litigation pending against Columbia and Screen Gems arising out of the sale of "Anatomy" to TV. He is seeking $4.5 million in damages, alleging breach of contract, one allegation being that TV stations were allowed to interrupt the film with advertising blurbs.

Another producer-director, George Stevens, also sought to have his Academy Award-winning film "A Place in the Sun" protected from the TV film editor's scissors. Prior to its being aired on NBC's Saturday Night at the Movies, Stevens obtained a preliminary court injunction forbidding the network to, insert commercials in such a manner as to "alter, adversely affect or emasculate the artistic quality" of his picture. When "Sun" was shown, Stevens and his lawyers went back to court, complaining that it was interrupted nine times to promote a charity, two NBC programs and 21 commercial products and services ranging from beer to health aids. He asked the court to find NBC guilty of violating the preliminary injunction.

The court ruled against him, and for a most ironic reason. The presiding judge, Richard L. Wells, said, "The main reason why the television version did not violate the injunction was the power and strength of the film. In this case the film was so dramatic, strong, exciting, romantic, tragic, interesting and artistic that it continued prevailed over the commercial interruptions." It could be said that Stevens defeated his own case by producing such a fine motion picture.

But even though Stevens lost that battle, the war still rages. He has a suit pending against NBC and Paramount studio—which sold the film to the network. He claims to have contractual rights under which he would be the sole editor of "A Place in the Sun," rights he claims have been violated. Stevens is asking $2-million in damages.

Explaining his stand, Stevens says, "The motion picture is a most fragile form of communication. It makes its point by claiming undivided attention." TV, he insists, "cuts between cause and effect." You will sometimes get effect without cause from a truncated version, he believes.

"I can't and I won't make films that can stand up to this," he says. "When we heard they were putting it ['A Place in the Sun'] on TV, we asked them not to. I didn't make this film for money solely."

Stevens regards commercials as rival films fighting for audience attention, clashing with the feature movie's mood. He said it is tantamount to interrupting a symphony concert with a rock-'n'-roll session.

Official Hollywood—in this case the Directors Guild of America—is backing Stevens and Preminger. George Sidney, Guild president for 16 years, calls commercial interruptions "fraudulent." He says the practice is "cheating and deceiving the public because the sponsor goes out and advertises a work of art" and then intrudes on the theme to tell a story about soap. "You're not giving them the work the sponsor advertised any more than if you buy a book and on the fiftieth page you insert a short story," he says.

The actors, especially those top-ranked stars who rarely appear on TV, are generally sympathetic to the complainants. But some, like Jimmy Stewart, think the battle is lost. "I think it's useless to fight this," he says. "TV audiences are used to commercials; they're a fact of TV life."

But Stewart, a conservative Air Force Reserve general, is critical of the cutting. "One of my pictures, 'It's a Wonderful Life,' is about an angel who helps me," he says. "Well, in the picture I was about to commit suicide and Henry Travers, the Angel, comes down from heaven to save me. That whole scene was cut up, so the introduction of the character was gone. He just shows up."

Grant seeks compromise

Cary Grant, a TV star by virtue of his old movies, hopes for a compromise that could solve the problem. "This is going to persist for a while," he says. "We should make our pictures like a play . . . in terms of intermissions." He, too, complains about indiscriminate cutting, saying, "I don't think somebody puts a moon in somebody else's painting."

John Wayne is another star whose movies have sold uncounted dollars' worth of soap, cigarets and automobiles, although he never intended them to. In the current dispute, Wayne sees some good in the fact "that everybody takes an interest in our racket," although he, too, argues against too many "intermissions." "A lot of pictures I made I don't like when I see them on TV," he says. "If you have a dramatic point in a story, they have no regard for it. Take a picture like 'Two Jims.' It wasn't programmed for this type of entertainment."

The problems of indiscreet film editing will be with TV for a long time. Cary Grant suggests that the answer may rest with the viewers when he predicts that "people will say, 'It's useless to watch these pictures; they've been cut up too much.'"

FOR THE RECORD

Northern California Edition

CBS Scoop: While the world—including the U.S. State Department and America's major press services—awaited word from an aloof Ho Chi Minh as to whether North Vietnam would or would not try the captured American airmen as “war criminals,” CBS took the simple, almost childlike, action of asking the man.

He said no.

Or at least, “no trial in view.” The cable from CBS News had also queried North Vietnam's President regarding the terms under which peace could be expected—to which Ho made the by now familiar demand that American soldiers must be withdrawn from Vietnam.

CBS, of course, scooped the entire world of newsmen with its story, and Senate Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R.; Ill.), remarked wryly that he found it “singular that a private enterprise like CBS could get a responsible answer to a cable when in fact we seem to get nothing official about efforts to get some word out of them [the North Vietnamese] for peace at the conference table.”

Dramatic Days for Drama: First ABC had set forth its ambitious plans for ABC Stage 67, complete with writers of the stature of Truman Capote, Murray Schisgal, John Le Carre, Oscar Wilde, Jean Cocteau and Katherine Anne Porter; and actors and actresses like Sir John Gielgud, James Mason, Ingrid Bergman, Peter Sellers, Jason Robards Jr. and Sir Michael Redgrave.

Then came CBS, announcing that it would follow up its highly successful “Death of a Salesman” with Tennessee Williams' “The Glass Menagerie,” Arthur Miller's “The Crucible” and a half-million-dollar budget “to encourage the writing of original dramas expressly for television.”

Last week NBC made it unanimous for the drama with a capital D by reminding one and all that it had been nobly serving this particular muse right along—with Hallmark Hall of Fame. Furthermore it was now commissioning one or more top-rank playwrights to write plays directly for television.

Speaking of Unanimity: A new salvo in the desultory battle for the midnight minions was fired last week by ABC in the shape of an announcement that Joey Bishop would conduct a 90-minute (11:30 P.M. to 1 A.M.), Monday-through-Friday variety show, beginning in April 1967.

Bishop, who has just finished a two-week assignment substituting for Johnny Carson, purposes to model his show more along the Jack Paar pattern than the Carson approach. Like both shows, it will feature guests and its own permanent performers. ABC will telecast the show from a color-equipped studio in Hollywood.

CBS will make it unanimous for variety at midnight. The network recently indicated that it, too, would institute a late-evening network show by autumn of next year—or sooner.

ATTENTION, SPONSORS!

Each year, along with millions of other television viewers, I look forward to the new fall programs. And, when the week finally arrives, I find it hard to pick and choose between the channels. Everything seems so new, so fresh, so promising . . . everything except for one large item: spliced into each new program are the same old, tired commercials I have been watching all summer long within the reruns. Believe me, if I were a sponsor of a new television series premiering in fall, I'd premiere some new, fresh and promising commercials at the same time.

Virginia E. Hjelmstad Minneapolis

We are all resigned to commercials being an integral part of television, but has it ever dawned on the sponsors that showing the same commercial over and over again, some for well over a year, has the adverse affect. I could name several products my friends and I wouldn't buy because we are just about at the screaming point with the constant repetition.

June Roden Clarkson, Ont.

HOPEFUL

Moving toward fall of 1966 leaves me with the feeling of tiptoeing into some never-never land . . . I fear that when I arrive it will dissolve into a barren wilderness. Can it be that this will be a banner year in television? All signs point to such an event, and I am holding my breath and hoping that everything promised to us will be forthcoming.

SEE HERE, MR. MUGGERIDGE

Malcolm Muggeridge must know that when he asks, "Does not the mere process of preparing a spectacle for millions of eyes preclude artistic excellence, intellectual subtlety, and even, in absolute terms, truth?" The question is academic ["Is Anyone Really Listening?" July 23]. Very recently we saw "Death of a Salesman" on TV and there was artistic excellence, intellectual and absolute truth. The British wit, as you call him, just isn't charged with objectivity—certainly not in this article.

HOW ABOUT HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS?

Mr. Harold Dunn's "The Class of '78 Comes Up with Some Classics" [TV GUIDE, July 23] was too phony to be funny — fourth-grader remarks (quote) expressed in that delightfully original style of children (unquote)—who does he think he's fooling? If these remarks were from a class of fourth-graders, then they didn't start school until they were eight.

Cassius Clay

Brian London

SPECIAL Cassius Clay defends his world heavyweight title against England's Brian London in a match telecast live via the Early Bird satellite.

Under British boxing rules only the referee will score the scheduled 15-round bout. Bill Flemming and Howard Cosell report for "Wide World of Sports" from London's Earls Court Stadium.

Clay, 24, has 19 KO's and no losses in 24 professional fights. He has successfully defended his crown against Sonny Liston, Floyd Patterson, George Chuvalo and Henry Cooper. A boxer-puncher, Clay has the edge in speed, age, reach, weight and height.

London, 32, is a tough and willing mixer with a powerful left hook that could be the key to an upset. He numbers Willie Pastrano, Pete Rademacher and Roger Rischer among his 27 KO victims. He has lost to Ingemar Johansson, Eddie Machen, Patterson and three times to Cooper. He has been decked six times, and Clay will try to make it seven by concentrating on London's vulnerable chin. ## 8:30 9 PLAY OF THE WEEK—Drama

'Rashomon'

Carol Lawrence,
Ricardo Montalban
and James Mitchell

A forest near Kyoto, Japan, a thousand years ago. In the heat of the afternoon, a bandit sees a husband and wife moving along the path. "I saw a woman's face," the bandit later tells police. "In that first moment I made up my mind to take her. Even if I had to kill the man." And then we see re-enactments, not only of the bandit's story, but also the husband's, the wife's and a woodcutter's. Each story is different.

"Rashomon" first came to the attention of American audiences as a Japanese film.

Fay and Michael Kanin used the original sources, stories by Ryunosuke Akutagawa, for their Broadway version in 1959. Sidney Lumet directed the Kanins' offering for television, via tape. (Two hours)

TV CLOSE-UP GUIDE

12:30 3 4 7 PRO FOOTBALL

SPECIAL The Buffalo Bills meet the Patriots in an exhibition game at Boston College Stadium. (Live)

Bills Scouting Report

Quarterback Jack Kemp leads a squad of seasoned stand-outs who are aiming for their third straight AFL championship. Elbert Dubenion and Glenn Bass, injured most of last season, will join Paul Costa to form a dangerous pass-catching trio. Rookie halfback Bobby Burnett should complement veteran fullback Wray Carlton. The defense is tough—due to linemen like Jim Dunaway, Tom Sestak and Mike Stratton; and backs like George Saimes. The Bills' toughest problem may be finding a replacement for kicking star Pete Gogolak.

Patriots Scouting Report

Last year, the Patriots finished strong to capture third place in the Eastern Division. Further improvement may depend on quarterback John Huarte's fulfillment of his star potential, and Jim Nance's consistent ground gaining. Gino Cappelletti combined touchdown catches and field goals to win the AFL scoring championship. Other top receivers are Jim Whalen and Art Graham. Rookies Carl Singer and Dick Arrington should help the offensive line. Linebacker Nick Buoniconti is a stand-out on defense.

ELEVENTH HOUR REPORT

PHIL WILSON

11:00 PM WEEKNIGHTS

KXTV 10

“Just months ago

all I could talk about was babies and recipes

...then The National Observer came into our home, bringing fascinating new food for thought—and conversation—for the whole family.”

“Soon after Carol Sue was born, I found my whole life was absorbed by her. All I could think about was her needs. All I could talk about was babies and formulas and recipes.

“When friends dropped in, and the conversation turned to world affairs, or the new books and plays, I had absolutely nothing to say.

“Of course, I love my family and I wouldn’t change places with anyone on earth. But I was beginning to feel very sorry for myself, so left out of things!

“Then I decided to take a friend’s advice and set aside time for myself to catch up with the world. I subscribed to The National Observer. And it turned out to be just what the doctor ordered.

“Because The Observer is a weekly newspaper, it has time to explore the news in depth . . . and I have time to read it thoroughly. I get a clear picture of what’s happening in the world and why. And not only does The Observer report on all the major news, it also has dozens of articles on fascinating news sidelights. For instance, items such as these:

. . . why Johnstown, Pa., has the nation’s lowest crime rate

. . . why people 65 and over are still buying health insurance, despite Medicare

. . . why Pop Art’s best days may be still ahead

. . . why high-income city dwellers are renting cows from Oklahoma ranchers

. . . why an expedition of eight Americans to the South Pole is considered vital to the space program

“So you see, I have lots to talk about these days, besides Carol Sue. And

So many people are talking this way about

that's a good thing. Because pretty soon she'll be talking for herself!"

Today, thousands of families all over the country are enriching their lives and adding to their reading pleasure through The National Observer.

The National Observer is published by Dow Jones & Company, the same world-wide news-gathering organization that publishes The Wall Street Journal. For two successive years, The Observer has won top national awards for distinguished reporting.

Because The Observer is printed on high-speed newspaper presses in its four modern printing plants across the country — and because newspapers can be “made up” and printed faster than magazines — last minute stories can be filed only hours before the paper comes off the press.

You get more news — and you get more out of it. In only 18 to 32 full-size newspaper pages (printed on our own special crisp, white newsprint) you often get more reading material than in other news weeklies. The newspaper format permits not just one major “cover story,” but five or six. Inside pages are important news pages, too — there's no “letdown.” More than 50 excellent pictures open windows not only on the people, places and events in the headlines, but also on such colorful sidelights as the Laguna Indians doing a traditional dance to celebrate their new electronics plant . . . or the spectacle of an elephant giving his autograph.

Many Enjoyable Special Features

Each week, too, The National Observer brings you more than a dozen special features that add to your enjoyment or broaden your knowledge in important areas. “The Week in Washington,” for example, can be read in a matter of minutes, yet it brings you up to date on significant happenings in Congress, the White House, Government agencies, the courts and politics. Similarly, “How's Business?” fills you in quickly on important trends in industry, the performance of the stock market, economic indicators, and company and executive highlights.

For Bridge enthusiasts, there's “Better Bridge”; for crossword fans, a really challenging puzzle; for recipe collectors, a gem or two almost every week in “Food for Thought.” And for both you and your youngsters, there's a weekly news quiz, plus “Current Events Classroom” — a column which brings you news background on such topics as how the Federal Reserve Board exercises its power and protects itself from Administration control . . .

t The National Observer. Why not join them?

the mystery of certain Unidentified Flying Objects for which the Air Force has no explanation . . . why the Peace Corps is considered such an important part of our foreign policy. "A Chat With the Doctor" brings you helpful medical hints on subjects ranging from indigestion to high blood pressure. On the lighter side, "Reflections" explores random aspects of life: the "good old days" when a pocket watch was a major status symbol . . . the different, distinct types of people found using coin-operated laundries. And the whole family will enjoy the dry humor of "Grass Roots Philosophy," culled from the home-town press. ("Brush your teeth regularly with an electric toothbrush and see your electrician twice a year.")

HIPS reduced in size at home!

"Hippy"? Take heart. Now you can reduce the size of your hips, waistline, tummy and thighs at home . . . while you rest, read or watch TV! How? With Relax-A-cizor, the modern no weight-loss, no-effort way!

Here's how it works! Many women lack good muscle tone because they don't get enough exercise. Relax-A-cizor gives effortless, concentrated exercise to such figure areas as hips, waistline, abdomen and thighs. Regular use (for only 30 minutes daily) causes these areas to reduce in size measurably — to the extent these muscles lack tone because of insufficient exercise. And the less the muscle tone the greater the degree of size reduction.

FREE! Find out what Relax-A-cizor can do for YOU. Send coupon for your free copy of "Your Figure".

AN ESSAY ON BRIDGES

"You build a bridge to last forever."
 —Othmar H. Ammann, bridge designer

SPECIAL Scheduled: a casual but appreciative review of the history, styles and lore of man's most daring art—the building of bridges.

Cameras view important bridges and methods of construction, including 2000-year-old Roman arches, which supported 60-ton tanks in World War II; the blatantly functional truss bridges; cantilevers, like Scotland's muscular Firth of Forth bridge; the Bayonne Bridge, the world's longest steel bowstring arch; the beam bridge, as elementary as placing a log over a ditch; and suspension bridges, such as the Brooklyn Bridge, a blend of medieval stonework and 19th-century engineering; and the Verrazano-Narrows, the world's longest suspended span.

Writer-producer Andrew Rooney also includes a layman's description of engineering principles. Narrated by Harry Reasoner, who collaborated with Rooney on the essays on doors and hotels. (R)

SPECIAL The Chicago Bears meet the Green Bay Packers in an exhibition game at County Stadium, Milwaukee. Lindsey Nelson and John Sauer report. (Taped from a live telecast)

Bears Scouting Report

In 1965, the Bears roared into third place in the Western Division after a dismal start. They're paced by halfback Gale Sayers, who as a rookie scored a record 22 touchdowns and led the league in scoring; veteran quarterback Rudy Bukich, the NFL passing champion; and end Mike Ditka, who was injured most of last year. Linebacker Dick Butkus leads the defense, which may have lost some of its punch: The retirement of key veterans will force the Bears to rely on rookie replacements.

Packers Scouting Report

Offensively, the defending champion Packers are a blend of seasoned stars and top rookie prospects. Veteran backs Jim Taylor and Paul Hornung will be challenged by '65 college heroes Donny

Anderson and Jim Grabowski. At quarterback, Bart Starr is backed by Zeke Bratkowski, who won three games as his replacement. The defense, which allowed the fewest points in the league, is anchored by veterans Willie Davis, Herb Adderley, Ray Nitschke and Willie Wood.

Answer to last week's puzzle

On location in Africa, Marshall Thompson gets a close-up of some Swazi manpower.

THE 'LITTLE FELLOW' OF 'DAKTARI'

It's easy to forget that Marshall Thompson is 6-feet-2

BY ARNOLD HANO

At the location site of Daktari, the popular CBS beast opera created by Ivan Tors and Art Arthur, you can always find Marshall Thompson during lunch break. He'll be last on the chow line.

After he eats, he'll apologetically ask the lunch crew whether they can spare some milk for his dog.

He likes animals. He even likes people. He hates to be continued away from his wife and daughter. If he had his druthers, he'd curl up at the new Thompson home in Pacific Palisades with a good book, preferably a kicky volume on the habits of the gnu or a ripsnorting adventure in archeology.

His notion of fun is to prowl a damp old cave in New Mexico in search of Indian relics. His day is complete if he finds a pottery shard. He studies languages and can get by in French, Spanish, Swahili and Tagalog. You never find his name in the gossip columns. He shuns night clubs.

If he has a vice, it is the Marrussi cigarets he chain smokes—black weeds from Mozambique that cost a whole 11¢ for a pack of 25. "They're great," he enthuses. He coughs all the time.

The worst cussword in Marshall Thompson's vocabulary is "by gosh"—without capitals and without an exclamation point. Cheryl Miller, the pretty, sexy young thing who plays Thompson's daughter in Daktari, trots out the adjectives you'd use to describe a polite department-store clerk. "Marsh is helpful, concerned, unassuming, friendly, unselfish. He is the original Boy Scout."

And John Ruth, veteran sound-department man on the set, says, "I'd rather work with this little fellow than with the big stars."

The "little fellow" is 6-foot-2, which is a key to Marshall Thompson. He comes on small. He describes himself, with a deprecatory laugh: "I am 165 pounds of fighting flab."

Yet appearances deceive. Just as he is not flabby but trim and hard, he is also not quite, as another crew member put it, "our beloved den mother."

Recently he and Daktari producer Leonard Kaufman and two cameramen found themselves in a jeep in Africa, shooting authentic footage of wild animals on the veld. Thompson was driving the jeep when suddenly—as producer Kaufman tells it—"We were surrounded by a herd of elephants. One bull elephant stood right in the path of the jeep."

Full speed backward

Thompson also recalls the incident. "There is an old African proverb, 'You cannot drive a jeep backward faster than an elephant can charge forward.' I disproved it."

Having escaped once, the nonflamboyant Thompson quietly suggested that to get more exciting footage it was now time for the jeep to charge the elephant. Naturally there was a 3-to-1 vote against, but Thompson cheerfully shifted gears and charged, until one cameraman mourned: "Can't we stop now? I can see his eyes."

Thompson said later, "Everyone should have one elephant charge in his life. It picks up the metabolism."

This is not the bravest moment of Marshall Thompson's life. On the same trip he charged a rhino, for more close-in film. For sustenance, he steeled himself to eating whatever was placed before him by African natives. On the set of Daktari he has wrestled lions, tigers and leopards. A 130-pound leopard was the worst.

The animals in Daktari are all "affection-trained," which is to say they are pampered, petted, spoonfed and loved into a state of cuddly tranquility. At least that's the theory. So Thompson fiercely grabbed this affectionate leopard, who promptly gave the star a love nip on the right arm. Thompson still has the scars. "It was my fault," explains Thompson earnestly. "I was clumsy. There are no dangerous animals. Just stupid people."

But not even this, nor the daily wrestling matches Thompson wages with a 700-pound bear, Bruno, truly detail his courage. It was the way he once handled a girl.

When he was a young actor he met a college coed and aspiring actress, Barbara Long, clad in a sleek black bathing suit, at a swim party at Roddy McDowall's. Thompson dated her.

Thompson and Miss Long appeared in summer stock a few months later, in a tissue-weight farce, "French Without Tears." For Miss Long, who played a Parisian maid, it was French without French. She couldn't speak a souçon of it. So Thompson scribbled her lines on a serving tray in a phonetic jargon (voilà became vwa-la; s'il vous plait became see vu play) and on opening night Barbara stepped out and painfully stammered her pidgin French. Whereupon Thompson took his life into his hands. He raised an eyebrow and asked with malicious glee, "Comment?" The poor girl had to plunge through the whole business again.

Naturally it was love at first sight. On July 4, 1948, Thompson asked her to marry him. "By gosh," he says today, in some wonderment, "she accepted." Today they are the parents of a 15-year-old daughter, Janet, a tall, leggy girl who has a lovely singing voice and gives guitar lessons.

Janet's talent stems from Thompson's mother, who was a concert singer and musician. But it is his father, a dentist, who dominates the family. "My dad is without question one of the finest, kindest, most considerate men that ever lived," he says.

James Marshall Thompson (the actor's real name) was born on Nov. 27, 1925, and lived briefly in Peoria, Ill., until his father's health dictated a move to the West Coast. From here grew Marshall Thompson's interest in animals—he spent the summers punching cows on ranches. One year, when he was 14, he competed in a rodeo.

Thompson intended to follow somewhat in his father's steps by taking a pre-med course at Occidental College. Two items roadblocked him: physics, which he could not pass; and a screen test, which he could.

The screen test came first. When Thompson was in high school he'd appeared in a production of "Our Town," attracting the attention of Universal-International. In 1943, while at college and not wrestling his science courses as well as he would later handle leopards, Thompson was offered $350 a week to appear in films. "Gosh," he says, "$350 paid my college tuition for a whole year. I thought I'd get rich and then go back to college." (He did not return to college, and he regrets it.)

Thompson has always come close to real success. He made lots of movies—among them "Valley of continued Decision," "They Were Expendable," "Roseanna McCoy," "Battleground" and "To Hell and Back"—but his screen image failed to project the charismatic quality that spells stardom. He says one of his better parts was in "The Purple Heart"; typically it ended in the cutting room.

On to Broadway

In the early 1950's he began to commute to New York to try out television. TV kept him busy—his studio-written biography says he acted in 250 shows, but Thompson characteristically doubts it was that many—and he even appeared in a Broadway comedy, "A Girl Can Tell," with Janet Blair, in 1953, which folded after eight weeks. The period, says Thompson, "was unpleasant and unstable, but I always made a living."

He almost made it big in 1960 when he starred in a one-season CBS situation comedy series, Angel, with Annie Fargé. "They kept changing the time slot," Thompson says today, "until the standing joke was not if you'd seen Angel, but whether you knew where to look."

But Thompson always had one thing in his favor: He really didn't care that he wasn't a raging star. He was then and remains today an easygoing man, the kind of guy who fits into the camouflage. Even his coloring is indecisive. He has hair that is best described as beige. His eyes are hazel and small. His husky voice lies between tenor and baritone.

Fans don't stop him on the street to tear off his clothes or demand autographs. This is fine by him. "I am not a person who revels in self-glorification," he says. "People leave me alone. I'm not Robert Mitchum. Nobody comes up and says, 'You're a tough guy, eh? Prove it!'"

If this suggests he is totally indecisive, there is evidence to the contrary. Five years ago he made a film in Vietnam, "A Yank in Vietnam," starring in, co-producing and directing the vehicle. He saw the war at close quarters. It firmed his opinion that the United States must stay in Vietnam. "I am opposed to the Vietniks who want us to get out," he says. "I saw too many twisted bodies of women and children, mutilated by the Vietcong. I saw people burned by electric-shock torture. When people say we should withdraw, I always add, 'Yes, we should withdraw, so that a million or two million people can be slaughtered.'"

But if Thompson does not want to withdraw from Vietnam, he remains basically the withdrawing type. The other day on the set of Daktari, he played a scene with a guest star, the powerful young Raymond St. Jacques.

"Gosh," says Thompson, "Ray was so good I started to pull back so I wouldn't intrude." Hotter heads prevailed. "You are," they reminded Thompson, "the star of the show."

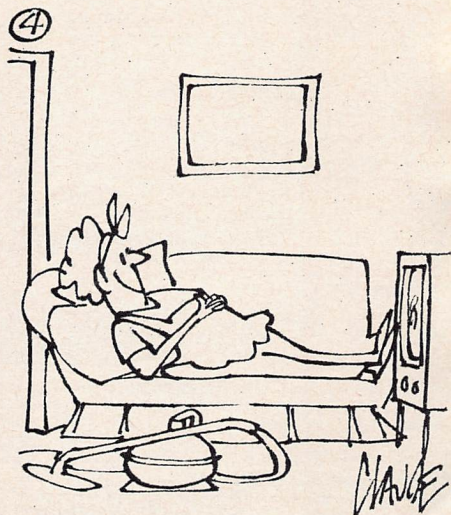

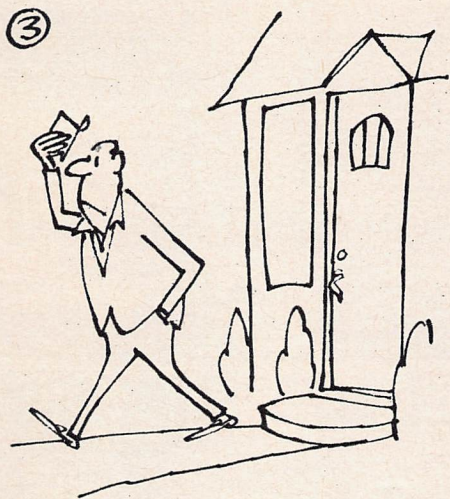

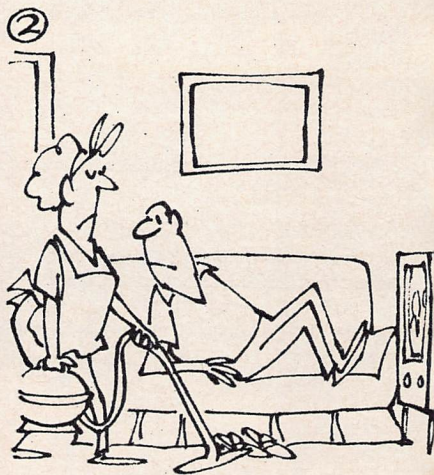

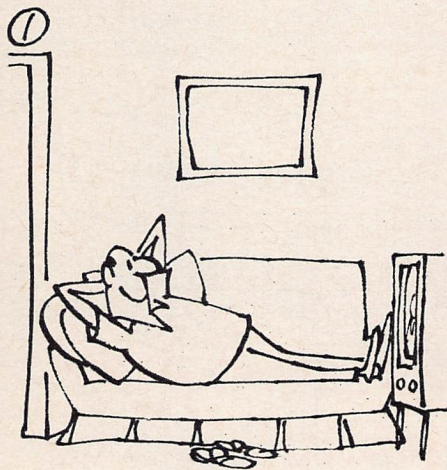

Well, sort of. As the veterinarian of an animal clinic in Africa, he often appears with an extrovertish clown of a chimpanzee named Judy, who is always saving Thompson from villainous poachers or other unscrupulous humans. It is largely the chimp, abetted by a cross-eyed lion named Clarence, who has carried the show into the top 20, and when Marshall Thompson gets fan mail these days it usually reads like this letter from a second-grader in Sheboygan, Wis.:

"Dear Mr. Thompson. I like your show very much. I like Judy and you." In that order.

Thompson insists he does not mind being upstaged by a chimp. Still, early last season he went to producer Leonard Kaufman and asked, "Do you suppose after we do 11 or 12 shows, and the ratings are good, maybe once I can save the chimp?"

Salad Days/ continued

The West Coast and Hawaii evoke pictures of blue waters and exotic seafood, fruits and vegetables. The salad is a most colorful way to add zest to a dull summer menu. Each salad should be made ahead to allow plenty of time for chilling.

MOLDED ORANGE-LIME SALAD

- |                                   |                                  |
|-----------------------------------|----------------------------------|
| 3 to 4 small naval oranges        | 1/4 tsp. Worcestershire sauce    |
| 2 pkgs. (3 oz. each) lime gelatin | Green coloring                   |
| 3 cups canned pineapple juice     | Quartered pineapple slices       |
| 2 tbsp. lime juice                | Sweetened whipped cream          |
| 2 pkgs. (8-oz. each) cream cheese | Fresh mint leaves                |
| 1/4 cup milk or cream             | Bottled oil-and-vinegar dressing |
| 1 tbsp. minced onion              |                                  |

Remove skin and membrane from oranges, cut crosswise into 1/2-inch slices, and line bottom and sides of a 2-quart bowl. Dissolve gelatin in 1 cup of boiling pineapple juice. Stir in remaining juice and the lime juice. Chill until slightly thickened. Beat cream cheese and cream until smooth. Stir in onion, Worcestershire sauce and thickened gelatin. Add coloring until a soft green color. Pour mixture into orange-lined bowl. Chill until firm. Loosen edge of mold with sharp knife, unmold on a platter. Garnish with pineapple slices, whipped cream, fresh mint leaves. Serve in wedges. Top with oil-and-vinegar dressing. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

WEST COAST CAESAR SALAD

- |                                   |  |
|-----------------------------------|--|
| 1 bunch romaine                   | 1/2 tsp. salt                                    |
| 1 bunch water cress               | 1/2 tsp. freshly ground black pepper             |
| 2 cups 1/2-inch cubes white bread | 1 egg  |
| 3/4 cup olive oil                 | 1 can (2-oz.) flat anchovy fillets               |
| 1 clove garlic, chopped           | 3/4 cup crumbled Roquefort cheese (1 3-oz. pkg.) |
| 3 tbsp. lemon juice               |  |

Wash and drain greens, trim water cress stems, tear romaine into bite-size pieces, cover with wax paper, chill to crisp. Brown bread cubes in 1/4 cup oil and garlic. Reserve. Mix remaining oil, lemon juice, salt, pepper and egg, beat until well blended. In salad bowl toss salad greens with dressing. Add drained anchovy fillets and Roquefort cheese. Toss again. Top with croutons and serve at once. Makes 8 servings.

FRUITS OF THE SEA SALAD

- |   |   |
|---|---|
| 2 pounds shrimp                               | Romaine lettuce leaves                                      |
| 1 tbsp. shrimp spice or whole pickling spice  | 2 avocados, peeled, diced and dipped in lemon juice         |
| 1 pound lump crab meat or Dungeness crab meat | 1 pkg. (10-oz.) frozen artichoke hearts, cooked and drained |
| 2 pkgs. (6 oz. each) frozen King crab meat    | 1 cup mayonnaise  |
|   | 1/2 cup pineapple juice                                     |

Cover shrimp with water, add spice, cook until shells turn pink and meat white. Rinse with cold water. Shell and devein. Remove bony fibers from crab meat. Thaw King crab and drain. Line a salad bowl with romaine leaves, arrange rows of shrimp, crab meat and King crab meat with avocado and artichoke hearts between seafood rows. Chill. Serve with a mayonnaise and pineapple-juice dressing. Makes 8 servings.

By Gerald Weales

The professional as amateur

As I remember it, the old George Gobel show was several cuts above the average television variety show. Yet, although I watched it often, only one sketch has stayed in my mind through the years that have turned Gobel from a comedian into a chicken-stew salesman. It was not the lines in the sketch, for they are long gone. It was not the situation, for it was only a variation on the perennial theme of guest-star Jack Benny's stinginess. It was what happened to the two performers. The imperturbable Gobel broke up the unflappable Benny, actually made him laugh in the middle of the sketch. For me, it was an historic moment, the confrontation of two professionals whom I admired, a conflict between generations, like something out of "The Master Builder." I laughed, but it was gentle laughter. I was bathed with affection for both Benny and Gobel.

If I had known then what I know now, the laughter would have stopped in my throat. I would have kicked myself for being a fool and my TV set for housing two frauds. The breakup may have been genuine, of course, but it was just such "accidents" and the audience's happy response to them that led us to where we are today—up to our ratings in calculated amateurishness. Every variety show on the air goes out of its way to prove that its host and its performers are just folks, unable to stop laughing long enough to play a scene, incapable of reading a line without flubbing.

Until this year, the chief offender was The Danny Kaye Show, where no sketch is played straight. The inside joke (and every viewer in every living room is on the inside) is that Kaye is so funny that his staff and his guests break up in his presence. This saves Kaye and his writers the trouble of turning good sketch ideas into complete sketches and lets them go for the easy, I-made-a-boo-boo laugh.

Now Dean Martin has come along to upstage Kaye. The Dean Martin Show puts its strongest emphasis on the casual. The impression is that the whole thing has been flung together, that Martin is barely awake or sober and that only good luck will get him through to the end. Even the least informed eye can see that the show is meticulously produced, that the accidents are planned, that the ad-libs are pounded out by a squad of writers. The one distinction of the show is that there is charm in the inept character that Martin plays, but otherwise it is as obvious in its carefully conceived mistakes as are The Hollywood Palace and the shows hosted by Red Skelton, Andy Williams and those which were done by Jimmy Dean and Sammy Davis Jr., among others.

For a couple of weeks last spring I watched variety shows with a pencil and notebook at hand. What came out of my scratchings was the recognition that there are really only two jokes in the professional-as-amateur bag of tricks, both of them designed to make the members of the audience feel as though they are part of the process of putting on the show. The first is the breakup, the descendant of the Gobel-Benny routine that delighted me years ago, but it has become so mechanical now that the surprise is gone.

The Dean Martin Show provides an elaborate instance of what has happened to the breakup. Martin not only sings with his singing guests but, usually, he does a scene with the comics. Inevitably he starts laughing in the middle of the sketch and whatever point it had is frittered away in silliness. For instance, the Bob Newhart sketch about the man returning a toupee to a department store. Newhart's reputation as a comedian is based on the fact that he can create a complete comic character in a short monolog, that he has no need for a partner to feed him lines. The toupee sketch was a bit broad, but it was basically funny; both Newhart's lines and the character—at once embarrassed and annoyed—whom he had devised to deliver them were amusing until Martin's bit killed them. First, Martin began to laugh, turning away as though he were trying to hide the fact. Then, he began to laugh openly. Then lines began to appear that had to do with the laughing, not with the sketch. A potentially funny sketch was thus destroyed to make room for a joke that is as familiar to the viewer as the canned laughter on a situation comedy. All the sketches on The Red Skelton Hour provide such lines.

The second of the two jokes I found is the idiot-card gag. Thus we find Dean Martin staring fixedly ahead, reading deliberately, as though he were in the third grade and has just been called on for reading recitation, and then tripping over a word oddly divided between cue cards: “. . . hou—” he ends a sentence, and, after a surprised pause, “—se.” Then he shakes a friendly fist at the camera. Jackie Coogan, blindfolded for a sketch on the Skelton show: “It's a good thing I learned my lines. I can't see the cue cards.” If this last instance is an example of the lamentable writing on the Skelton show, a corny joke explained, it is really not different in kind from the basic gag which insists that it is funnier to be wrong than it is to be witty or satiric or humorous.

Both antiprofessional jokes are almost certainly extensions of the device beloved of night-club stand-up comedians, the bewildered or angry enquiry that elicits a laugh to substitute for the one that an unsuccessful gag has just failed to get. Such a routine may have meaning in direct contact between a comedian and his audience, but—even though Jack Paar made a career out of begging from or abusing his audience—on television the device is pointless. The laugh, if it comes, will come in a living room days, often months, after the joke has been told.

Back in 1895, when Janet Achurch was contemplating lecturing on acting before a ladies' club, Bernard Shaw advised her to “shew them as many stage tricks as possible.” He added, “Remember, you cannot give yourself away too completely to please an audience.” Every variety show on television looks as though its producer, its director, its writers and its performers had read Shaw's advice and taken it to heart, but Shaw never intended that Janet Achurch make a career of self-revelation. The performers today are not only giving themselves away; they are also giving away their profession.

Her dad is John Payne, her mother is Anne Shirley, she's lived there all her life,
and she's in TV and the movies

Now take your average young actress. She either won a beauty contest or was born in a tank town or came from a poor section of a big city. Then she headed for Hollywood, where some big producer discovered her sitting at the soda fountain of Schwab's drug store. In other words, your average young actress has a story.

But not Julie Payne.

Julie is just a typical Hollywood kid: Her parents were both movie stars—John Payne and Anne Shirley. A few hours before she was born on July 10, 1940, they were having dinner at the Brown Derby. The Paynes were divorced in 1942. A year later, the fan magazines were saying that Anne Shirley was "the most dated girl in Hollywood."

Both parents have been married a couple of times since, so Julie has plenty of stepfathers, stepmothers, stepbrothers and stepsisters. Typical.

For a while, when she was little, her father and his new wife lived only a few blocks from her mother and her new husband. When Julie went to stay with her father, who had custody weekends and vacations, all she had to do was walk down the street.

Another thing. Your average young actress is deeply dedicated to her Art. Not Julie. She says, "I'm in it for the money. I'm not about to hold down a 9-to-5 job." But the Monday after the Friday she was graduated from Beverly Hills High, she went to work at Saks. She has been on her own since she was 18. Originally she wanted to be a racing driver and was on a racing team at 16. She has said, "I know more about the inside of a car than I do about the inside of a beauty parlor."

Your average young actress has to struggle, and sometimes that struggle can take a variety of forms. Julie says, "I never asked anyone for a job in my life." On the other hand, she says being the daughter of stars is "a handicap, because people are more critical of you."

Her first acting job was in Alcoa Presents. Her father gave her a part in his Restless Gun series ("A deaf mute—that's all he'd trust me with"). She has also appeared in The Fugitive, The Wild, Wild West, The Alfred Hitchcock Hour and Dobie Gillis, and in such movies as Elvis Presley's "Girls! Girls! Girls!" ("I never saw that!" she says), "Island of the Blue Dolphins" and "Irma La Douce." Of the parts she plays, she says, "I always seem to end up either in a Bikini or a slip"—except in "Island of the Blue Dolphins," where she was an Indian girl and wore burlap.

Finally, your average young actress will often marry a producer or her agent, who is usually a lot older than she is. But not Julie. In November 1964 she married a young actor named Skip Ward. Less than a year later they parted. Typical. "It was all a terrible mistake," she says. Skip got custody of their dog, and Julie got the cat, which has since had a litter of kittens.

Thus, at 26, actress Julie Payne of Hollywood.
